A limited supply of donor human milk is now available for North Texas families.

More and more parents are calling Mothers’ Milk Bank of North Texas in desperate need of nutrition for their babies while others have offered support by becoming breastfeeding donors. These developments have prompted the milk bank to extend operations, creating an increase in the supply of pasteurized donor human milk. How YOU Can Help
Donate Milk
Our supply of donor human milk is dependent on the generous mothers in our community who donate their extra breastmilk to help other families. If you have extra breastmilk your baby won’t need, call us at 817-810-0071 or visit www.texasmilkbank.org, click “Donate Milk” and fill out a pre-screening form online.

Donate Money
Visit www.texasmilkbank.org and click the “Donate Money” tab. Gifts will support donor milk processing expenses that include donor screenings, lab processing, packaging and freezer storage.

Medically Needy Babies Affected by the Formula Crisis
Babies diagnosed with special medical conditions can qualify for donor milk; for example, a baby who relies on nutrition from a recalled specialized formula for kidney failure. Parents of babies with a medical need are urged to call the milk bank at 817-810-0071.
Breastfeeding Support
As an advocate for breastfeeding mothers, the milk bank offers free breastfeeding support groups where families can get help from a certified lactation consultant. This program, called Baby Café, is available in Fort Worth, Dallas and on a virtual platform. Details can be found at www.texasmilkbank.org under “Lactation Support”.

Our Work
The milk bank serves infants in crisis every day. As a consequence of the pandemic and other factors, demand for donor milk has increased significantly over the past two years. From 2020 to 2021, dispensation increased by 35 percent.

Safety
Mothers’ Milk Bank of North Texas has safely connected generous mothers to fragile babies for more than 17 years. Strict safety protocols protect vulnerable infants through rigorous donor screenings, milk processing standards and third-party testing.

Processing Fees
Fees typically charged for donor milk cover expenses for ensuring donor milk is safe (donor screenings and milk processing including pasteurization). As a nonprofit, the milk bank will incur processing fees and seek outside funding for support. Safety and quality assurance measures will not change.

Milk Donors
Mothers with extra breastmilk complete a screening that includes a medical history and blood test. They are not compensated for their milk donations and make milk banking possible.
